
Now you can express the inexpressible!

A brief history

It's a jungle out there! We're constantly judged by how we dress, what we do, and how we express ourselves through speech and the written word.

Do you know how to properly use "you're" and "your?" "It's" and "its?" "Comprises" and "composed of?"

Let me help!

My love of words doesn't stop with writing. It's just as important to take a step back and examine your words with an objective eye. My goal is to help you make the best possible use of the written word, so that you can say what you need to say with the greatest impact!

Specializing in creative communications

Experienced researcher & interviewer

Available for single projects and short- or long-term contracts

Willing to work on- or off-site

I first discovered my love of writing in the 4th grade. My innate need to be of service to others has led me down a couple of different career paths, but after four years as a corporate communications consultant I realized I could do my best only if I were true to myself and wrote on my own terms.

Why Write?

To me, that's like asking "why breathe?" If you've ever felt that feeling inside—that anxious feeling of dread and anticipation and excitement all rolled up into one—then you can understand the feeling I get when I sit down and begin to write.

It's a private moment, a private process, made public. Each word choice, each sentence or paragraph structure, is a reflection on you. But then again, each mind you've opened, each heart you've lifted, or each lesson you've taught, is a reflection on you too...
